Woodford Needs to Brush Up On Her Political Nomenclature

[Re: Woodford Files: May 2017; <http://tinyurl.com/kckfmfn>]

Good day! I enjoyed Julia's good spirited intro to the May issue [in "Woodford Files"] ... but I was a bit confused by the introductory remarks referring to "Premier Trudeau"? Is this a subtle sort of slip of the typing keys tongue, to make a point?

Has he been demoted in some Canadians' eyes because of his failure to fulfil his promises to First Nations? Maybe the more reminders he gets the more likely he will remember... magnesium could help his memory!

Thanks for being there... here... helping us see better ways to enjoy living...this life!

More than three cheers!!!
David Lance, Toronto

Woodford responds:

Hello David, Yikes! What a big fat booboo that was. Apologies to Prime Minister Trudeau for getting his title wrong. I better take some extra magnesium myself!

More Happy Subscribers to Our Free Digital Magazine

Would love to receive the digital version of magazine. This publication is life changing! Kudos and Gratitudes, Dana K., Oakville, Ont.

I really enjoyed reading your March and April 2017 issues of Vitality which contained a wealth of health info. And thank you for sending me the digital version – it's so cool, I just love it.

I have been telling my grown-up adult [28 to 36 year old] nieces and nephews about your cool magazine. Now, I can send them the link so they can read it themselves.

My kids are overseas in Australia and London, England, and also in the U.S. So sending them your magazine by email will be so much easier than mailing the print magazines to them.

The Scary Side of Cellphones and Other Wireless Devices

I believe that Sweden – and the world – is under unintentional attack by the manufacturers and operators of wireless devices and their towers. This year, the research team of Taheri et al. (2017) demonstrated that exposure to 900 MHz GSM mobile phone radiation, and 2.4 GHz radiofrequency radiation emitted from common Wi-Fi routers, actually makes Listeria monocytogenes and Escherichia coli bacteria become resistant to antibiotics. (See: <https://www.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/pubmed/28203122>)

These findings naturally have direct implications for the management of serious infectious diseases. With the ongoing development of more and more antibiotic-resistant microorganisms around the world, this adaptive phenomenon and its potential threats to human health definitely should be further investigated in controlled replication experiments! Now!

new generation of electronic gadgets and wireless services, sometimes referred to as the “Internet of Things,” more people are asking themselves these questions:

- Are the ever-increasing levels of electromagnetic fields (EMFs) really safe for living organisms;
- Are these wireless devices to be used only for the convenience of private persons, or are they just as convenient for surveillance of the public by political, military, and commercial entities;

- Do some gadgets create an open door for advanced cyber attacks of homes, schools, and workplaces;

- Do electromagnetic frequencies pose a threat to public health?

In the early 1980s, I decided that this is an issue which needs to be looked at more closely, and perhaps even needs an awakening – to stop it before it turns on us, other animals, plants and bacteria, as the “Idiocy of Things”!?

From a public health point of view, evidence in the form of thousands of peer review-based scientific publications is overwhelming – now society must dare to protect and to serve. Our actions must aim to serve our health and safety, not to serve commercial greed. Failing to protect ourselves leaves us open to attack that may harm us far more than any terrorists ever can.

Healthy People Want Healthy Pets

[Re: Healthy Pets section <http://tinyurl.com/HealthyPetsMay17>]

I really enjoyed your “Healthy Pets” section in May 2017 issue of Vitality and hope that you will run more items on animal health in the future. While there is certainly no lack of mainstream pet stores and questionable foods that cater to that market, I am much more interested in finding natural and organic pet products and holistic approaches to pet care. Thanks for leading the pack on this!
