Dear Ms. Olsen:

To follow up our recent conversation and your request for two questions regarding Smart Meters and our situation I offer the following:

1. What is being done to examine the relationship between the total exposure of electromagnetic radiation and health as opposed to the radiation reading of individual emitting devices? Public records of residential locations, individual medical records plus the location and strength of emitting devices could provide significant, if not definitive, evidence of this relationship? Why is this relationship not being examined?
2. What is the explicit relation of the BC Government to BC Hydro both of which are related through operation by one and the financial responsibility of the other? I do not believe that this can be a relationship of equals, i.e. that the decisions of a public/private company can be independent of the oversight of the government. Can you please explain this relationship and the role of the public in it?

We continue our discussion with BC Hydro on their demand.

Thanks for your consideration.
